IDLE A WHILE IN FARMVILLE

While the visitor is at Farmville, he may find an extra day devoted to historic shrines, or present-day facilities, of interest. The following are easily accessible within the community or by a few minutes ride by car:

● CIVIL WAR PERIOD

Sayler's Creek Battlefield—Where General Ewell and five other Confederate general officers and 7,000 of Lee's troops were captured in the last major battle of the war. It is now Virginia's only state battlefield park.

Hillsman House—used as a hospital during the action at Sayler's Creek. It has been restored to its original appearance, and is now the visitor's center at Sayler's Creek.

Lockett House—In Sayler's Creek battlefield, around which Gordon's men fought a bloody battle. United Daughters of the Confederacy placed a monument here.

High Bridge—the 100-feet high Southside Railroad bridge (now Norfolk & Western Railway) spanning the Appomattox River. It was the scene of an unsuccessful federal raid attempting to cut Lee's retreat route. It was fired in an attempt to hold back the advancing federals, but they succeeded in extinguishing the blaze and making a crossing to the north side of the river.

Confederate Cemetery—just across Appomattox River in Cumberland County from Farmville. Burial place for those killed at Sayler's Creek and the skirmishing as the armies passed through Farmville, or died in the Confederate Hospital located here.

General Lee's Last Camp Site—occupied the day after Appomattox, as Lee returned to Richmond. In Buckingham county on Route 60.

Sheridan's breastworks at Jetersville, Amelia county, on Route 360. These barred the path of Lee's retreating army and forced the northwest swing to avoid a fight.

Longwood Estate—home of Joseph E. Johnston, Confederate general. A beautiful antebellum home and grounds. The Longwood Golf Club is on the estate, and visitors may use its facilities for a modest greens fee.

The Jackson House—Where General Lee held his last council of war of Secretary of War John Cabell Breckenridge and other Confederate military leaders. On Beech Street, Farmville.

Historic Prince Edward Hotel—Farmville, where Grant stayed the night of April 7th, and from where he initiated the surrender notes. It is presumed that General Lee rested briefly there just prior to hi conference with Secretary Breckenridge.

Amelia Court House—County seat of Amelia county, and containing many buildings as they were during the war.

Amelia Springs—the spa for the well-to-do during the 1860's through which Lee passed on the retreat from Petersburg. Some of the abandoned hotel buildings remain.

● THE COLONIAL PERIOD

Hampden-Sydney College—Liberal arts men's college founded in 1776, with Patrick Henry on the first board of trustees. On Route 15 six miles South of Farmville.

Debtor's Prison—big prison for debtors erected in 1787, and still standing in its original appearance. Located in Old Prince Edward Court House, now the village of Worsham, on Route 15, six miles south of Farmville.

Briery Church—One of the oldest Colonial churches remaining in the original form. The 1818 Century Presbyterian Church is in Prince Edward County, near the Charlotte County line, 16 miles south on Route 15, turn right on Route 671, nearby, follow signs.

Red Hill—Patrick Henry's last home and law office. Restored through gifts of Eugene Casey, Maryland benefactor and Henry admirer. In Charlotte county. A boys' home is being erected on the estate. Route 15 to Keysville, turn right on Route 40, follow signs.

● THE MODERN ERA

Longwood College—Virginia's first teacher training institution for women. Now in its 77th session.

State Lakes—for boating, fishing, swimming: Holiday Lake, Buckingham-Appomattox counties; Goodwin Lake, and Prince Edward Lake in Prince Edward county; Bear Creek and Winston Lakes in Cumberland county.

Farmville Recreation Center—Community swimming pool, Little Boys Baseball Park, Athletic field, tennis courts, Longwood Golf Course, all adjoining.

THE HILLSMAN HOUSE IN SAYLER'S CREEK BATTLEFIELD

their flags in their trousers and were resigned to do what Gen. Lee had ordered . . . only to have a great Yankee, Gen. Joshua Chamberlain, left by Grant to receive the Surrender, give them a full military salute. Of a sudden, instead of a humiliating "walk up the hill," the most dramatic moment in all American history became an occasion of the Confederates regaining their pride, snapping to smart military routine, and Gordon responded to Chamberlain's dignified honor, and recognition. Ah yes, the final handful of the finest army the world ever knew. But Chamberlain gave them full honor, and they responded. Schaff told of it. "Whenever men plough the fields of great deeds in this world they sow broadcast the food of creative powers of the mind. This single Appomattox event lifted it to a hallowed summit for all people."

The ceremony of Surrender, in front of the Court House, took up the entire day. Major William A. Owen, adjutant of the fabulous Washington Artillery of New Orleans, in his diary, described the scene of the Surrender. He said that after receiving the paroles, he assembled his men and read the famous "Order No. 9" of Gen. Lee, bidding farewell to his men. It says: "The men listened with marked attention and with moistened eyes as the grand farewell from their old chief was read and then, receiving their paroles, they every one shook my hand and bade me goodbye, and breaking up into parties of three or four, turned their faces homeward, some to Richmond, some to Lynchburg, and some off to far-off, ruined Louisiana. I watched them until the last man disappeared with a wave of the hand around a curve in the road and rode away from Appomattox."

The writer would like to suggest that what our war-weary world needs so desperately, is not "away from Appomattox" but a remembrance of what "away from Appomattox" meant, and what in this alleged Christian times we can do to seek to halt the killing, the blood, the wars and rumors of wars . . . and what we can do to make of Appomattox Court House a true shrine of a gentleman's Peace.

An article of this type does not permit of "editorializing." But it is recorded that at Appomattox, Gen. Grant said, "Let us have Peace." And Gen. Lee, in his subsequent deeds showed us the way: return to our homes, educate our children and become good citizens to live in a peaceful world. It is my opinion that the "Crown of Thorns" placed upon the brow of our Blessed Savior two thousand years ago, was lifted for a few moments at Appomattox Court House in April 1865, and as during the Civil War Centennial years, we re-enact battles, let us also find a place in our observances for a remembrance of the Creator of us all, who when He sent His Only Son into the world, did not send Him as a Warrior to kill, but as the Prince of Peace. Did not the angels sing: "Tidings of Peace on Earth, to men of good will"?

Sunset Of The Confederacy

Ere I recite the opinion that I am leaving out some of the very best accounts of the final campaign, may I shorten this article by saying that I have not only read virtually all of them, but have most of them in my personal library. And I would like to state it as my opinion that the top book on the final campaign is "The Sunset of the Confederacy," by Morris Schaff. This volume, of which I have two copies, published in 1912, is now very rare. It is the sort of book drawing tears to the most sterile eye. Listen at the very first words: "Longer are the shadows, richer are the colors, deeper is the feeling as the close of the day draws near, and the sun goes down; so was it with the War of the Great Rebellion as its end drew near." He tells so very emotionally and dramatically of the fall of Richmond, and the local stands, and of the great stand at Sayler's Creek. He has the best maps I have seen of this campaign. I used my personal metal detector and Schaff's map of Sayler's Creek, and in one brief afternoon found eleven cannon balls and other gear. He was a master historian, and also a gifted writer.

Perhaps other articles in this issue will describe the incidents from Richmond to Appomattox. No one ever did it better than Morris Schaff, backed by maps and details. But, when Schaff came to the Appomattox episode, he won true literary and historic fame.

Honored In...Surrender

He sensed, wisely, that the Surrender did not take place in the McLean House. The rebuilt private residence is the locale of the meeting of Lee and Grant to arrange THE TERMS of Surrender. The Surrender took place three days later, when the remnants of the glorious Army of Northern Virginia, led by Gen. John B. Gordon, with the 23 heroes of the Old Stonewall Brigade at the lead, walked up the hill from the tiny mouth-formed waters of the Appomattox River. They hated the crown of thorns of laying down the few arms they had left, many had

FARM AGENT'S NEWS

FEED GRAIN PROGRAM

Farmers were indicating in early March that they intended to plant about the same acreage in feed grains and other crops that they planted in 1960. These intentions influenced the enactment of the 1961 feed grain program aimed at helping farmers reduce unneeded production.

Those who cut production 20 per cent will receive half the amount of grain they would normally have grown on the acreage taken out of production and put to soil conserving use. Those who make a bigger cut, up to 40 per cent, will get 60 per cent payment-in-kind from government storage for the added reduction.

If the farmer elects, the Department of Agriculture will sell the corn for him. He can get approximately half the payment due him at the time he agrees to cut production under the feed grain program.

Thus, as farmers cut production, the program provides for taking a proportionate amount of grain out of storage and making it available for sale on the open market, by the farmer or by the government.

CHECK PRIVATE WATER SUPPLY FOR SAFETY

How safe is the water you drink at home?

E. B. Hale agricultural engineer at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, says if the water comes from an approved public supply, you can be sure of its safety. If it is you have your own well, cistern, or spring, it's a good idea to check it periodically.

Hale says the fact that you may have used your well or spring for many years without any apparent trouble doesn't mean it hasn't become contaminated. Even one or two tests which show water is not contaminated do not necessarily mean you have no pollution now, because contaminated water may enter the system at intervals.

If water is contaminated it must be treated. The most widely used way to purify water is by chlorination. Several problems are involved, however, in chlorinating water. You must be sure you have a type of chlorine feeder which will deliver a given amount of chlorine into the water supply, regardless of pressure or other factors. The positive displacement type of chlorine feeder is generally considered best. Chlorine for treating water is readily available in many different forms, the most common of which are the household bleaches. The chlorine solution must be renewed every week to 10 days so a definite schedule must be established.

Hale says some type of precaution should be considered for every private water supply. Your county sanitarian or your county agent for help in securing your water supply.

4 P. M. BURNING LAW STILL IN EFFECT

The 4:00 P. M. burning law is still in effect, Division of Forestry Foresters reminded us the danger of forest fires mounts with warm weather.

Care by those who have had burning to do has kept fire losses low, but forest wardens caution that the most dangerous period is yet to come. Spring rains dry away quickly, the wardens say, and fires can escape if care is not taken in burning trash and brush.

The law effective from March 1 through May 15 allows burning of any material only between the hours of 4:00 P. M. and 12 midnight if the fire is in or within 300 feet of forestland or other inflammable material.
